MAN WANTED HERE CAUGHT BY TRICK

Failed to Appear for Trial in Adams County Court on Monday. Sudden and Unexpected Appearance of Armed Officer.

In a sensational arrest Wednesday night, Howard Dill—wanted here to answer a charge of false pretense preferred by S. A. Haverstock, of near Heidlersburg,—was caught and placed in the jail at York. Dill is held in $300 bail for appearance at the April sessions of Adams County Court. When he failed to appear Monday his recognition was forfeited to be resited upon his appearance later this week.

The case in the local court grows out of the purchase of a horse from Mr. Haverstock, Dill giving a note for it and claiming, it is alleged, that he held property in York. The story of Wednesday night's arrest is told in the following dispatch from York:

Howard Dill, under indictment in the York county court for aggravated assault and battery when he disappeared last week and $500 bail was declared forfeited; under $300 bail for a criminal charge pending in Adams county, and wanted also by Detective Oscar Stoner, of York, for larceny by bailee of a pair of mules valued at $100, belonging to Fred E. Maish, of Red Lion, had the surprise of his life late Wednesday night when in filling a date to meet a pal he was confronted by Detective Stoner with a big revolver, for the detective had hidden beneath a pile of bags in the bed of the wagon in which the partner had gone to meet Dill.

The fugitive was then loaded into an automobile and taken to the York jail on a process which had been issued for his arrest, as well as on an aldermanic warrant. The detective learned that Dill was at a house in the upper end of York county and on Wednesday, accompanied by Justice Artzberger, of Dover, he went to the house, but Dill escaped and hid in the woods. The detective discovered, however, that Dill had arranged to meet a friend at 9 o'clock the same night and Stoner went along to the meeting. When Dill climbed into the wagon he faced the detective's gun and the jig was up.

Maish, in his prosecution, alleges that Dill had agreed to sell the mules for him at a stipulated figure. Instead, he charges, Dill sold them last Wednesday without consideration of their agreement, and has paid him no part of the money he received.

FOR ORGAN RECITAL

Gettysburg will have a rare musical treat on Friday evening, May 12, when Gatty Sellers, a famous English organist of Queen's Hall, London, will give a recital in the Methodist church here. ## DIES CHATting WITH RELATIVES

Unexpected End of Well Known Farmer. Mrs. John Good Dies at her Home in Gettysburg. Funeral Private on Sunday.

Charles F. Patterson, a well known farmer residing near Abbottstown, died from acute dilation of the heart at his home Wednesday night at 9 o'clock, while engaged in conversation with other members of the family. Patterson exhibited no signs of illness, whatever, during the early part of the evening; neither did he complain.

He suddenly collapsed in the rocking chair in which he was sitting. With the assistance of members of the family he was removed to the front porch. In the meantime, Dr. T. C. Miller was summoned. He pronounced death due to acute dilation of the heart, and gave it as his opinion that Mr. Patterson had died before being removed to the porch.

With him at the time were his wife, his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Fahs and their daughter, Erma, Miss Lydia Patterson, another daughter, and a neighbor. They state that Mr. Patterson had practically no ailments throughout his entire life. He was aged 58 years and 21 days.

He leaves his wife and the following children: Mrs. Harvey Fahs, Bigmount; Clinton, Thomasville; Myrl, Nebraska, and Lydia Patterson, at home. These brothers and sisters also survive: W. R. Patterson, Nebraska; L. F. Patterson, and J. O. Patterson, of Harrisburg; J. W. Patterson, Hanover, and Mrs. Ida H. Trimmer, of East Berlin.

After their marriage they continued to reside on the home place in Huntington township for a number of years. In 1891 they moved to Gettysburg where Mr. Good engaged in chair making which he has successfully carried on to the present time.

Besides her husband, she leaves the following children: Harry Good, of San Francisco, California; Charles Good, York, and Miss Annie Good, at home. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. Frank Wagner, of Carlisle street, this place.

TRAMP NUISANCE MUST BE STOPPED

Declares Burgess and Officers will Make Short Work of Vagrants in the Town. Usual Army Invading Gettysburg.

Instructions were given the borough police to-day, by Burgess Eicholtz, to renew their vigilance in apprehending tramps and to become more vigorous in enforcing the regulations which would bar completely the unwelcome visitors from the town. A veritable stream of vagrants has passed through Gettysburg this week and many of them have become quite annoying to local residents.

The Burgess intends to put into effect his bread and water diet on all tramps that fail to leave town upon the first warning. Several days in the village lock-up and the meager menu have always had a most salutary effect in past years and they will be brought into action again if the warnings do not do the work.

The army of tramps that has invaded Adams County during this week comes from every section. The wanderers claim many different states as their original homes and few of them can give any reasonable excuse for being on the road. It is well known that any able bodied man who wants work just now can get it and the "respectable tramp", who takes to the road in times of financial depression, is an exception in the present aggregation.

The professional tramp, the man out of work by reason of intemperance, the partially crippled workman, and the man who fails to be able to get along with his employer, constitute the principal classes represented just now, and numerous requests for charity have been made to citizens.

It is to prevent these annoyances and to save the town from becoming a haven for this class of individuals that the Burgess and police are now starting forth on their annual spring crusade.

Walter Garrett, pastor. Mt. Zion Reformed church, Spring Grove, was chosen as the place for the fall convention, which will convene the first Thursday in November.

Madame Layah Barakat, of Philadelphia, a widely known lecturer on temperance and missionary subjects, addressed the evening session, which convened at 7 o'clock. Madame Barakat spoke entertainingly on the subject of "The Broken Vessel" for a period of 45 minutes. An audience numbering fully 500 persons, which filled the church to its capacity, greeted her.

Twenty five delegates, representing nine congregations in the classis were in attendance at the session. Owing to the impossibility of getting to Abbottstown by rail the attendance was not as large as it might have been. The opening session, which convened at 2 p. m., was called to order by the president, Mrs. Sprengle. The convention entered into an immediate business session, when the old officers were re-elected as follows: president, Mrs. William E. Sprengle, of Nashville; vice president, Mrs. Walter Garrett, of New Oxford; recording secretary, Mrs. Rhea Krouse, of Abbottstown; corresponding secretary, Miss Katharine Duncan, of Gettysburg; treasurer, Mrs. George W. Welsh, of Spring Grove. Miss Wolf, of Abbottstown, was elected superintendent of the literature committee.

ORDER AMERICANS OUT OF MEXICO

Feeling Against U. S. is Spreading Rapidly.

FEAR STORM IS BREWING

General Obregon and General Scott to Meet on the Border Near El Paso to Discuss Conditions.

El Paso, Tex., April 23.—Disturbing reports were received from many points in northern and central Mexico regarding anti-American feeling among the people.

The most serious of these referred to towns in Durango, and especially to Durango City, where Americans still living there have been repeatedly warned by United States Consul Cook to leave.

As far as can be learned, there are not more than a dozen Americans still in Durango city, and the majority of these have married into Mexican families and consider themselves safe.

The trouble seems to be due in part to the persistent anti-American campaign which has been carried on by Mexican newspapers in the state capital. This campaign has increased in violence since the clash at Parral between United States soldiers and Carranza troops.

Americans arriving from Durango and southern Chihuahua say the Parral incident has been magnified out of all proportion and grossly distorted by Mexican papers, which have described it as a great Mexican victory. The American soldiers are declared by these papers not only to have been badly beaten, but to have shown cowardice, and to have run away after massacring a number of Mexican women and children.

At the same time, most of the reports agree that the Carranza generals and other responsible officers have done everything in their power to restrain the civilian population, and have shown an earnest desire to avoid an outbreak.

The uncertainty over the whole situation is believed to be greatly increasing the dangers of serious friction, but there is a general hope that the coming conference of Major General Hugh H. Scott, chief of staff of the United States army, and Major General Frederick Funston with General Alvaro Obregon, Carranza's minister of war, will have a quieting effect.

The conference will be held in El Paso, Juarez, just across the border, or "this vicinity," according to the statement of army officials, which was confirmed by Mexican Consul Andres Garcia.

The chief point to be discussed at the conference, is understood to be whether the United States troops, pursuing Francisco Villa, are to be withdrawn. It was learned, however, that Obregon will ask an explanation of the fact that the American expedition has been considerably increased since the de facto government demanded its recall.

At present there are some 17,000 troops south of the border. It is understood that all the 2300 reinforcements which were hastened to Columbus have crossed the boundary into Mexican territory.

CONVICTS ATTACK SUSPECT

200 in Penitentiary Attempt to Mob Alleged Slayer of Girl.

Lansing, Kan., April 23.—Angered by the stories of the murder of ten-year-old Edna Dinsmore, in Topeka, on Tuesday, two hundred prisoners attempted to attack Fred Bissel, of Topeka, suspected of the crime in the state penitentiary yard.

The prisoners had heard of Bissel's arrival to save him from the Topeka mob that invaded Lawrence, and under the cry of "come on boys," they rushed at him. Deputy Wardens and prison guards bluffed the prisoners to submission.

HOLD ON TO VON IGEL PAPERS

Bernstorff Refuses to Identify Them Pending Orders From Berlin.

DEMANDS U. S. PROBE OF TELEGRAM 'PLOT'

Senator Protests Against Flood of Messages.

Washington, April 23.—Senator Husting, Democrat, told the senate that the American embargo conference had conducted a campaign in Wisconsin to induce him to support an embargo resolution against shipment of war munitions to Europe.

He submitted a thousand letters from Wisconsin citizens, which he said all emanated from the Chicago headquarters of this organization.

In a stirring speech, Senator Husting demanded a congressional investigation into the flood of telegrams pouring into congress on the German-American situation.

He characterized the sending of these telegrams as a "deep-laid plot to poison the minds of the people with the belief that the president wants war."

"I bring this matter before the senate in the hope of exposing a plot which, if allowed to continue, must bring us into serious trouble, at home, if not abroad, and to defeat the purposes of people who, in the garb of the Prince of Peace, are endeavoring to stir up dissension in this country," he said.

"We ought to have a very careful inquiry and find out who is putting up the money for putting this foul stuff into the mouths of the people."

The senator denounced the sending of the telegrams as tending to defeat the purpose of the president's last note to Germany.

"The question now before the country is whether Germany is going to yield or not," he said, "and yet at a hour like this we have the spectacle of 200,000 or 300,000 of our citizens sending telegrams to their congress, telling us that the United States is wrong and Germany is right. It is time this government took hold of these telegrams and followed them up to their poisonous sources."

L. Hopkins, who was president of the Newport News Ship building and Drydock company.

GERARD TO TALK WITH KAISER

To Confer on the Submarine Crisis.

HE GOES TO THE FRONT

U. S. Ambassador Talked Over Situation With German Foreign Minister Before Leaving Berlin.

Berlin, April 23.—James W. Gerard, the American ambassador to Germany, left Berlin for the German army headquarters, where he will be received by the German emperor.

Foreign Minister von Jagow called on Ambassador Gerard at the American embassy for a talk on the general situation.

Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German imperial chancellor, who up to the present time has been at the army headquarters, is expected to come to Berlin today to prepare Germany's answer to the latest American note.

The Frankfurter Zeitung's Berlin despatch takes a more hopeful view of the German-American situation. After referring to the various conferences already held and to be held, it adds:

"It is naturally impossible to say what will come from these. But outward circumstances confirm the opinion that hope need not yet be surrendered that a way to reach an understanding and avoidance of a conflict between Germany and the United States can be found."

"The views of political circles vary slightly regarding the significance of such a conflict in connection with the world war in which we are involved, and the group of politicians and publicists who now, as formerly, are endeavoring with all arguments to prove that the conflict is American, and that, as a consequence, the submarine warfare carried on by us without all scruples, would mean an advantageous development for us, is, after all, very small."

The Frankfurter Zeitung names the Tageszeitung and the Kreuz Zeitung as the principal exponents of this theory, and continues:

"It is of especial, even of decisive importance, to know whether the imperial government has become convinced that President Wilson in his heart of hearts desires to avoid a breach. In this connection the repeated conferences which the imperial chancellor has had with the American ambassador are of indisputable interest. One can deduce from the course of the councils following these conferences what opinion the imperial government probably has come to regarding President Wilson's final desire."

The Berlin newspapers refrain from all comment, with the exception of a brief polemic in the Tageszeitung against the Tagesblatt, in which the writer says that a service can be done to the government by the press giving expression to the people's indignation at the attitude of the United States. The article is a sharp attack on Americans, who are termed hypocrites and are accused of unneutral motives in assuming the stand they have taken."

ACCUSE GIRL OF ARSON

Farmer's Daughter Charged With Burning Barn.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 23.—State authorities have caused the arrest of State Barnick, a fourteen-year-old Perry county girl, who confessed to burning her father's barn because he refused to permit her to marry sixty-year-old John Smith.

GERMANS WIDENING OFFENSIVE IN WEST

Report 500,000 Fresh Troops Arrived at Verdun Front.

London, April 23.—There are signs of increasing German activity along virtually the entire battle front in the west, notably on the southern end of the line, down to the Vosges.

The great struggle at Verdun is being continued with little diminution in vigor, however, with the German heavy guns almost continually in play.

A despatch from Amsterdam says that five hundred thousand fresh German troops have been concentrated on the Verdun front, according to reports, the German general staff having resolved to capture the fortress by June 11.

The only infantry movement in the Verdun region noted in the Paris statement was to the north of Fort Vaux northeast of Verdun, where what is alluded to as "a small attack" was stopped immediately by the French artillery.

In Lorraine the Germans are feeling out the French positions. Dispersal of a reconnoitering party which attempted to reach the French lines east of Le Mesnil is reported by Paris while north of the Aisne German patrols were driven back with hand grenades.

This widening offensive was first taken in some quarters as covering the abandonment of the attempt at Verdun and the withdrawal of the troops or such of them as are left, for service elsewhere. The French have been expecting such a move for some time but if the Amsterdam despatch is well founded, this expectation apparently is not.

TORPEDO BRITISH CRUISER

Berlin Reports Warship Hit and Submarine Sunk.

Berlin, April 23.—The German admiralty announced that the British submarine E-22 had been sunk by German naval forces.

The announcement also says a British cruiser of the Arctura class was hit by a torpedo from a German submarine.

The announcement, given out under date of April 26, is as follows: "The German naval forces on April 25 sank the British submarine E-22. The Germans rescued and captured two men."

"A German submarine on the same day hit with a torpedo a British cruiser of the Arctura class."

FINE PICTURE BRINGS LARGE COMPANY ALONG

Full Orchestra and Other People who were in Big Cities will Come with "Birth of a Nation."

After more extensive and sensational publicity than has fallen to the lot of any other theatrical enterprise, D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" will open a two days' engagement next Monday evening at Walter's Theatre. The first class metropolitan production is guaranteed to be the one shown here, carrying two baggage cars of equipment, a symphonic orchestra of musical experts, and a complete traveling organization of 25 people.

Many circumstances have conspired to make "The Birth of a Nation" the most widely discussed play in the world. Suggested by Thomas Dixon's Southern novels, it embraces a far wider scope than "The Clansman" play. Mr. Griffith's new art covers 150 years of history and pictorializes the greatest events of the War between the States as well as those of Reconstruction.

Lincoln, Lee and Grant; the early glories of the Confederacy; the devastation of Gen. Sherman's march to the sea; the awful siege of Petersburg; the signing of peace at Appomattox; the assassination of the President in Ford's Theatre; and the succeeding orgy of hate and oppression of the south—these personages and incidents pass rapidly before the enthralled spectator and lead up to the terrific climax of Part II, which is devoted to what has been styled "the second struggle between the North and the South," a struggle caused by the attempt to impose carpetbagger rule upon the conquered states.

The wild adventures and achievements of the Ku Klux Klan dominate the final scenes which yield a happy ending of a double romance of Southern and Northern sweethearts.—advertisement

SENDING MINISTERS HOME NOT FOR UNITED STATES

But Never In History Has a German Ambassador Been Handed His Passport.

British Representatives Have Been Sent Back For Interference With Commerce.

WHEN the negro receiver of the state department in Washington, who for almost forty years has been the American government's official passport carrier, visits the German embassy—if the break with Germany comes—it will be the first time in the history of the United States that this country has severed relations with that empire or with any of the states which were united to form the latter's realm.

Since our government was founded many ambassadors have been sent home, but in the majority of cases the cause was their own indiscretions. The closest approximation to the present situation was in the case of the famous Citizen Genet, in the administration of Washington, and even the wedding Frenchman was more to blame for his recall than the Girondin government which had sent him here to enlist this country as an ally of France in her war with England.

Genet traveled from one part of the country to the other, campaigning for sympathy for his own country and rousing factional and racial strife. So ardent was he in his campaign that he publicly attacked the most prominent persons, and after a spectacular controversy with John Jay and Rufus King, wrote an insolent letter to President Washington. Soon thereafter France was requested to recall him. His passports were handed to him, but he never returned to France. He had married a daughter of Governor Clinton and he lived in obscurity on his estates in the Hudson valley until 1820.

Arrange Treaty With British.

Hardly had Genet passed from public view when, in 1794, the British navy, and especially British privateers, seized American ships and cargoes by the scores under the pretense that they might be carrying aid to France. The indignation of the country was great, but as there was no ambassador to send home the house of representatives passed a bill prohibiting all commercial intercourse between citizens of the two countries. The senate voted it down, and then Washington sent John Jay to London as envoy extraordinary to arrange a treaty. The treaty was arranged, but when the senate advised Washington to sign it the whole country was roused to anger. Jay and Washington were bitterly denounced. Virginia threatened to secede, and writers in the newspapers even accused the president of venality. The treaty was so favorable to the British that the French saw in it a secret alliance with England, and as a result the Robespierre government demanded the recall of Gouverneur Morris, the American minister.

Morris was the first American envoy to have his passports returned by the government to which he was assigned, but the two countries did not go to war, although the international situation was as tangled as it is today, and Washington was bitterly assailed by his political opponents. Although the fact is forgotten nowadays, France and the United States were bound together by a treaty of offensive and defensive alliance, yet as soon as Great Britain declared war and attacked France the American government issued a proclamation of neutrality. This on its face was a breach of the national contract, and Washington was severely scored for not aiding France for permitting the British to bring prizes into American ports, for allowing Englishmen to board an American ship in Long Island sound and for permitting English warships to be fitted out in American ports. But in those days France had troubles pleridic at home, and she sought no additional ones across the ocean, although it appeared to her that Washington was doing his utmost to provoke a war.

Minister Monroe Recalled.

James Monroe was sent to France as Morris' successor, but he aggravated the situation, the tenaciousness of which had been increased by the capture of an American ship near the Delaware capes by a French privateer. As a result of this capture the French minister, Adet, was called on for an explanation. He could give none, and Monroe was recalled. Charles C. Pinckney was sent abroad as his successor, but the French directory refused to receive him until her grievances had been righted. All America was incensed, the president proclaiming a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer; congress was called; the refusal on the part of France to receive our minister is the denial of a right. But war did not follow. Nor did it follow soon thereafter when Pinckney, Gerry and Marshall, who had been ordered to heal the differences with France, were boldly told by Talleyrand that money would mend all the ills of the Paris government. "American anger was great over this demand for tribute; war resolutions were introduced in congress, the navy was increased, crowds shouting "Down with France!" paraded the streets of Philadelphia, New York and Boston; commercial intercourse was suspended.

Real Meaning of Luck.

Luck means the hardships and privations which you have not hesitated to endure; the long nights you have devoted to work. Luck means the appointments you have never failed to keep; the trains you have never failed to catch.—Max O'Reil.

HOME NOT FOR UNITED STATES

British Representatives Have Been Sent Back For Interference With Commerce.

During the Napoleonic wars the foreign interests of the United States were constantly menaced by one or the other of the belligerents. The decrees of Napoleon were usually aimed at Great Britain, but they almost invariably hit American commerce, and the British orders in council just as frequently harmed the interests of the "United States. In those days no European power permitted any foreign ships to carry on any trade with her colonies, and as the United States had no colonies of her own, these orders in council worked a great hardship on the American merchant marine. On Nov. 15, 1806, a law went into effect forbidding the importation from Great Britain of a long list of goods. This was regarded as a polite way of breaking off diplomatic relations.

Blow to American Commerce.

One week after this bill was passed and before the law became effective, British warships attacked an American ship two miles off Sandy Hook and shot off the head of the helmsman. The body of the sailor was viewed by indignant crowds in New York. President Jefferson ordered British warships to leave American ports and sent commissioners to England to demand redress. They arrived abroad just as Napoleon issued his famous Berlin decree blockading the British islands and practically wiping out American trade. The British countered by prohibiting neutral trade with France, and America was practically the only nation then trading with France. The blow was a most serious one to the commerce of this country. The United States was ground between the two millstones—England trying to drive America into a war against Napoleon France trying to force her into strife with England.

At this crucial juncture the British Whigs fell from power, and while the new government was studying the situation a bomb upset everything. The Leopard, a British warship, which had been assisting in a high handed blockade of the American coast for three years, made an attack on the Chesapeake, an American warship suspected of having British deserters aboard killed three and wounded eighteen of the crew and almost sank the vessel before the American commander hauled down his flag. Again the country was aroused over the outrage. President Jefferson issued a proclamation shutting our ports to armed ships of England, troops were called out, congress was gathered and a commissioner sent to England to demand redress. After many delays Great Britain discovered the Leopard's acts and recalled her commander. Then congress, to cure all the ills that Napoleon and Britain had heaped on America, passed a law prohibiting American ships from leaving the ports of the United States for those of any foreign power.

But plenty of ships left America ports surreptitiously and so crowded the harbors of Spain that Napoleon saw his opportunity and seized them all. Again the war cry was raised, and the French minister was about to be sent home when the Spaniards rose drove Napoleon out of the country and liberated every American ship.

Left England In Angry Mood.

Meanwhile Pinckney, the American minister at London, tried to heal the breach between the two countries growing out of the orders in council. He was unable to make progress, and taking advantage of the failure of the British to appoint a minister to succeed Jackson, who had been sent home because he had insulted President Madison, asked for his passports and in 1811 left London in a threatening manner. This was the only time in history that an American minister returned from England in a huff. In the following months the relations between the two countries grew more strained over the impressment of American seamen and the seizure of American cargoes and in June, 1812, war was declared. Then the British minister received his passports, but in a different spirit from that in which his predecessors had received theirs.

Daily Thought.

You were made for enjoyment, and the world was filled with things which you will enjoy, unless you are proud to be pleased by them, or to grasping to care for what you cannot turn to other account than mere duty.—Ruskin.

HOMESTEAD COLONIES ARE FOUNDED IN GEORGIA

Families From Crowded Cities Sent to Small Fertile Farms.

During the last half dozen years there have been many forms of encouragement to people from other sections to go to the south and settle. Where large tracts of fertile but undeveloped territory are available, but it appears that the work of the Southern Settlement and Development organization of Baltimore, which has branches in other southern points, is meeting with more success than any movement to this end which has yet been attempted.

This organization has already brought a large number of homesteaders to Dixie and in each instance has been successful in getting the newcomers well located and satisfied. A good example of this work is the recently done near Albany, Ga., in the southern portion of that state. The establishment of the colony of home steads at Albany has proved a decidedly greater success than was a first anticipated, and plans are now on foot to send an additional lot of colonists to Georgia from the middle west.

The purpose of the organization is to settle and develop southern farm area by sending homesteaders from the crowded western and eastern cities. The 3,000 acre plantation of H. W. Johnson, one of the community's big gest planters, was subdivided into forty acre lots. Nineteen families were transported from Chicago and as many homes provided for them on nineteen of the forty subdivisions. Each home and forty acre farm was provided with mules, cows, seeds and a model country residence. The terms are long time deferred payments.

The farm land is fertile. Even some of the most inexperienced farmers among the settlers have found the soil surprisingly productive. Most of them are Russian born American citizens progressive, ambitious and energetic. They have been in Georgia since November, 1915, and there has not been a note of dissension or dissatisfaction in the entire colony.

The educational features of the settlement promise to set a new epoch in Georgia's agricultural progress. The settlers are being interested in stock growing and diversified farming. The leaders of the colony are looking forward to the time when they can purchase live stock and make their newly acquired interests productive of cattle as well as general crops.

A Street Car Miracle

The baby laughed—and through the car. Of dull eyed folk at the nightfall wear. The little silver ripple ran, And in its wake the smiles began. Like sunshine over waters dreary.

The baby laughed—and shoulders bent. 'Neath weight of toil and trouble tragi. Straightened with motion swift and strong As if that burden, carried long. Had lifted been by merry magic.

The baby laughed—and one who came. As slumber stilled that music's ringing. Looked wondering down the crowded car. "How brave, how kind these faces are." He thought, with hope and faith up springing.

CHAPTER XXX.

Sibyl and Roscoe were upon the point of leaving when Bibbs returned to the new house. He went straight to Sibyl and spoke to her quietly, but so that the others might hear.

"When you said that if I'd stop to think, I'd realize that no one would be apt to care enough about me to marry me, you were right," he said. "I thought perhaps you weren't, and so I asked Miss Vertrees to marry me. It proved what you said of me, and disproved what you said of her. She refused."

And, having thus spoken, he quitted the room as straightforwardly as he had entered it.

"He's so queer!" Mrs. Sheridan gasped. "Who on earth would thought of his doing that?"

"I told you," said her husband, grimly.

"You didn't tell us he'd go over there and—"

"I told you she wouldn't have him, didn't I?"

"Sibyl was altogether taken aback. 'Do you suppose it's true? Do you suppose she wouldn't?'"

"He didn't look exactly like a young man that had just got things fixed up fine with his girl," said Sheridan. "Not to me, he didn't!"

"But why would—"

"I told you," he interrupted, angrily. "She ain't that kind of a girl! If you got to have proof, well, I'll tell you and get it over with, though I'd pretty near just as soon not have to talk a whole lot about my dead boy's private affairs. She wrote to Jim she couldn't take him, and it was a good, straight letter, too. It came to Jim's office; he never saw it. She wrote it the afternoon he was hurt."

"I remember I saw her put a letter in the mail box that afternoon," said Roscoe. "Do you remember, Sibyl? I told you about it—I was waiting for you while you were in there so long talking to her mother. It was just before we saw that something was wrong over here, and Edith came and called me."

Sibyl shook her head, but she remembered. And she was not cast down, for, although some remnants of perplexity were left in her eyes, they were dimmed by an increasing glow of triumph; and she departed—after some further fragmentary discourse—visibly elated. After all, the guilty had not been exalted; and she perceived vaguely, but none the less surely, that her injury had been copiously avenged. She bestowed a contented glance upon the old house with the cupola, as she and Roscoe crossed the street.

When they had gone, Mrs. Sheridan indulged in reverie, but after a while she said, uneasily, "Papa, you think it would be any use to tell Bibbs about that letter?"

"I don't know," he answered, walking moodily to the window. "I been thinkin' about it." He came to a decision. "I reckon I will." And he went up to Bibbs' room.

"Well, you goin' back on what you said?" he inquired, brusquely, as he opened the door. "You goin' to take it back and lay down on me again?"

"No," said Bibbs.

"Well, perhaps I didn't have any call to accuse you of that. I don't know as you ever did go back on anything you said, exactly, though the Lord knows you've laid down on me enough. You certainly have!" Sheridan was baffled. This was not what he wished to say, but his words were unmanageable; he found himself unable to control them, and his querulous abuse went on in spite of him. "I can't say I expect much of you—not from the way you always been, up to now—unless you turn over a new leaf, and I don't see any encouragement to think you're goin' to do that! If you go down there and show a spark of real git-up, I reckon the whole office 'll fall in a faint. But if you're ever goin' to show any, you better begin right at the beginning and begin to show it to-morrow."

"Yes—I'll try."

"You better, if it's in you!" Sheridan was sheered nonplused. He had always been able to say whatever he wished to say, but his tongue seemed bewitched. He had come to tell Bibbs about Mary's letter, and to his own angry astonishment he found it impossible to do anything except to scold like a drudge-driver. "You better come down there with your mind made up to hustle harder than the hardest workin' man that's under you, or you'll not get on very good with me, I tell you! The way to get ahead—and I tell you better set it down in your books—the way to get ahead is to do ten times the work of the hardest worker that works for you. But you don't know what work is, yet. All you've ever done was just stand around and feed a machine a child could handle, and then come home and take a bath and go callin'. I tell you you're up against a mighty different proposition now, and if you're worth your salt—and you never showed any signs of it yet—not any signs that stuck out enough to bang somebody on the head and make 'em sit up and take notice—well, I want to say, right here and now—and you better listen, because I want to say just what I do say. I say—"

He meandered to a full stop. His mouth hung open, and his mind was a hopeless blank.

Bibbs looked up patiently—an old, old look. "Yes, father, I'm listening."

"That's all," said Sheridan, frowning heavily. "That's all I came to say, and you better see 't you remember it!"

He shook his head warningly, and went out, closing the door behind him with a crash. However, no sound of footsteps indicated his departure. He stopped just outside the door, and stood there a minute or more. Then abruptly he turned the knob and exhibited to his son a forehead liberally covered with perspiration.

"Look here," he said, grossly. "That girl over yonder wrote Jim a letter—"

"I know," said Bibbs. "She told me."

"Well, I thought you needn't feel so much upset about it—"

The door closed on his voice as he withdrew, but the conclusion of the sentence was nevertheless audible—"If you knew she wouldn't have Jim, either."

And he stamped his way downstairs to tell his wife to quit her fretting and not bother him with any more fool's errands. She was about to inquire what Bibbs said, but after a second thought she decided not to speak at all. She merely murmured a wordless assent, and verbal communication was given over between them for the rest of the afternoon.

Bibbs and his father were gone when Mrs. Sheridan woke, the next morning, and she had a dreary day. She missed Edith woefully, and she worried about what might be taking place in the Sheridan building. She felt that everything depended on how Bibbs "took hold," and upon her husband's return in the evening she seized upon the first opportunity to ask him how things had gone. He was noncommittal. What could anybody tell by the first day? He'd seen plenty go at things well enough right at the start and then blow up. Pretty near anybody could show up fair the first day or so. There was a big job ahead. This material, such as it was—Bibbs, in fact—had to be broken in to handling the work Roscoe had done; and then, at least as an overseer, he must take Jim's position in the Realty company as well. He told her to ask him again in a month.

But during the course of dinner she gathered from some disjointed remarks of his that he and Bibbs had lunched together at the small restaurant where it had been Sheridan's custom to lunch with Jim, and she took this to be an encouraging sign. Bibbs went to his room as soon as they left the table, and her husband was not communicative after reading his paper.

She became an anxious spectator of Bibbs' progress as a man of business, although it was a progress she could glimpse but dimly and only in the evening, through his remarks and his father's at dinner. Usually Bibbs was silent, except when directly addressed, but on the first evening of the third week of his new career he offered an opinion which had apparently been the subject of previous argument.

"I'd like you to understand just what I meant about those storage rooms, father," he said, as Jackson placed his coffee before him. "Aberromble agreed with me, but you wouldn't listen to him."

"You can talk, if you want to, and I'll listen," Sheridan returned, "but you can't show me that Jim ever took up with a bad thing. The roof fell because it hadn't had time to settle and on account of weather conditions. I want that building put just the way Jim planned it," said Bibbs. "You can't have it," said Bibbs. "You can't, because Jim planned for the building to stand up, and it won't do it. The other one—the one that didn't fall—is so shot with cracks we haven't dared use it for storage. It won't stand weight. There's only one thing to do: Get both buildings down as quickly as we can, and build over, brick's the best and cheapest in the long run for that type."

Sheridan looked sarcastic. "Fine! What we goin' to do for storage rooms while we're waitin' for those few bricks to be laid?"

"Rent," Bibbs returned promptly. "We'll lose money, if we don't rent, anyhow—we're waitin' so long for you to give the warehouse matter your attention after the roof fell. You don't know what an amount of stuff they've got piled up on us over there. We'd have to rent until we could patch up those process perils—and the Krivitch Manufacturing company's plant is empty, right across the street. I took an option on it for us this morning."

Sheridan's expression was queer. "Look here!" he said, sharply. "Did you go and do that without consulting me?"

"It didn't cost anything," said Bibbs. "It's only until tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock. I undertook to convince you before then."

"Oh, you did?" Sheridan's tone was sardonic. "Well, just suppose you couldn't convince me—"

"I can, though—and I intend to," said Bibbs, quietly. "I don't think you understand the condition of those buildings you want patched up."

"Now, see here," said Sheridan, with slow emphasis. "Suppose I had my mind set about this. Jim thought they'd stand, and suppose it was—well, kind of a matter of sentiment with me to prove he was right."

Bibbs looked at him compassionately. "I'm sorry if you have a sentiment about it, father," he said. "But whether you have or not can't make a difference. You'll get other people hurt if you trust that process, and that won't do. And if you want a monument to Jim, at least you want one that will stand. Besides, I don't think you can reasonably defend sentiment in this particular kind of affair."

"Oh, you don't?"

"No, but I'm sorry you didn't tell me you felt it."

Sheridan was puzzled by his son's tone. "Why are you sorry?" he asked, curiously.

"Because I had the building inspector up there, this noon," said Bibbs. "And I had him condemn both those buildings."

"What?"

"He'd been afraid to do it before, until he heard from us—afraid you'd see he lost his job. But he can't condemn them—they've got to come down now."

Sheridan gave him a long and piercing stare from beneath lowered brows. Finally he said, "How long did they give you on that option to convince me?"

"Until two o'clock tomorrow afternoon."

"All right," said Sheridan, not relaxing. "I'm convinced."

Bibbs jumped up. "I thought you would be. I'll telephone the Krivitch agent. He gave me the option until tomorrow, but I told him I'd settle it this evening."

"They've Got to Come Down Now."

Sheridan gazed after him as he left the room, and then, though his expression did not alter in the slightest, a sound came from him that startled his wife. It had been a long time since she had heard anything resembling a chuckle from him, and this sound—although it was grim and dry—bore that resemblance.

"Startin'?" Lord! He got me on the hip! Why, he knew what I wanted—that's why he had the inspector up there, so 't he'd have me beat before we even started to talk about it. And did you hear him? 'Can't reasonably defend sentiment!' And the way he said 'Can't reasonably defend sentiment'!

There was always an alloy for Mrs. Sheridan. "I don't just like the way he looks, though, papa."

"Oh, there's got to be something! Only one chick left at home, so you start to frettin' about it!"

"No. He's changed. There's a kind of a settish look to his face, and—"

"I guess that's the common sense comin' out on him, then," said Sheridan. "You'll see symptoms like that in a good many business men, I expect."

"Well, and he don't have as good color as he was gettin' before. And he'd begin to fill out some, but—"

Sheridan gave forth another dry chuckle, and, going round the table to her, patted her upon the shoulder with his left hand, his right being still heavily bandaged, though he no longer wore a sling. "That's the way it is with you, mamma—got to take your frettin' out one way if you don't another!"

"No. He don't look well. It ain't exactly the way he looked when he began to get sick that time, but he kind of seems to be losin' some way."

"Yes, he may 'a' lost something," said Sheridan. "I expect he's lost a whole lot of foolishness besides his Godforsaken notions about writin' poetry and—"

"No," his wife persisted. "I mean he looks right peaked. And yesterday, when he was settin' with us, he kept lookin' out the window. He wasn't readin'."

"Well, why shouldn't he look out the window?"

"He was lookin' over there. He never read a word all afternoon. I don't believe."

"Look here!" said Sheridan. "Bibbs might 'a' kept goin' on over there the rest of his life, moonin' on and on, but what he heard Sibyl say did one big thing, anyway. It woke him up out of his trance. Well, he had to go and bust clean out with a bang; and that stopped his goin' over there, and it stopped his poetry, but I reckon he's begun to get pretty fair pay for what he lost. I guess a good many young men have had to get over worries like his; they got to lose something if they're goin' to keep ahead of the procession nowadays—and it kind of looks to me, mamma, like Bibbs might keep quite a considerable long way ahead."

Why, a year from now I'll bet you he won't know there ever was such a thing as poetry! And ain't he funny? He wanted to stick to the shop so's he could 'think'! What he meant was, think about something useless. Well, I guess he's keepin' his mind pretty occupied the other way these days. Yes, sir, it took a pretty fair-sized shock to get him out of his trance, but it certainly did the business."

He patted his wife's shoulder again, and then, without any prefatory symptoms, broke into a boisterous laugh.

"Honest, mamma, he works like a gorilla!"

JIMMY MADISON.

"Withered Little Applejohn," Irving dubbed the President.

"What presidents we might have had, sir," a Washington hubber lamented soon after Jefferson went out of office. "Just look at Daggett of Connecticut or Stockton of New Jersey! What cues they have got, sir! As big as your wrist and powdered every day like real gentlemen, as they are. But this little Jim Madison, with a cue no bigger than a pipstern, sir! It is enough to make a man forswear his country!"

Short and wrinkled, with a cast in his eye and a voice scarcely audible in public speaking, the new president did not make a good impression as he began his inaugural address. He was pale and "trembled excessively," and the swaying motion of his body and all the peculiarities of his poor delivery, including his air of having risen casually and with no intention of making a speech and desiring above all things to escape, were as annoying as usual. But he gained poise as he proceeded, and Jefferson was convinced that his friend would develop equal assurance in dealing with the problems of his administration.

That night at Long's hotel in Georgetown, where guests thronged to the first inaugural ball in the country's history, the former president was in evidence again, joyous and smiling, a contrast to the distant little figure in black standing beside Mrs. Madison, regal in her yellow velvet, pearls and turban. Some thought her the abler as she was the better favored, of the two. "As to Irving, who had come with a host of others to seek office, 'ah, poor Jimmy! He is but a withered little applejohn.'"

To an intimate this withered little man could talk delightfully, but in the presence of a crowd he retreated into bored and almost repulsive silence. He had had the misfortune to be born with the sober characteristics of an old man. Even in college he had been painfully correct and shunning the slightest appearance of frivolity. The president made the damaging impression that during his whole stay at Princeton Madison never did an indiscreet thing. It was fortunate that his lively wife was at hand to supply his lack of magnetism—Helet Neolay in Century.

IRISH REVOLT IS SPREADING

Entire Country is Placed Under Martial Law.

FIGHTING STILL IN DUBLIN

Government Troops Rushed to Capital, While Warship's Guns Cover City. 42 Killed and 46 Wounded in Street Battles.

London, April 28.—The uprising started by members of the Sinn Féin and other sympathizers in the separatist movement in Dublin, Monday, is spreading, particularly in the western part of Ireland.

The revolutionists still hold important public buildings in the capital, and fighting continues in the streets. Martial law has been proclaimed over the entire country.

Major General Sir John Maxwell, who formerly commanded the British forces in Egypt has been sent to Ireland with plenary powers to put down the rioting.

These facts were made known by Premier Asquith in a speech in the house of commons, when called upon to inform the house of the situation. British warships, it also is known, have been sent to Dublin, and are anchored in the bay with their guns covering the city.

According to historic custom, the royal proclamation, suspending in Ireland section 1 of the defence of the realm amendment act, was read from the steps of the Royal Exchange. The suspension takes from a British subject charged with an offense under the act the right of trial by civil court.

Premier Asquith told the house the situation still presented serious features. The troops, he said, have been strongly reinforced, and more are being sent, enough, he said, to satisfy the government that the force is adequate to deal with the situation. Irish authorities will place themselves at the disposal of Major General Maxwell, to carry out his instructions.

The premier said there would be a searching investigation into the cause of and responsibility for the outbreak. He added that it was obviously necessary to exercise military censorship while martial law prevails. This censorship will be directed merely with regard to essential military requirements of the situation, he added, and all possible latitude in the transmission of news will be allowed.

Despatches from Dublin say that houses of persons suspected in connection with the uprising are being searched. A number of newspapers have been suppressed by Baron Wimborne, lord lieutenant of Ireland.

Reports that the rioters had sacked part of the city have received official color from a statement by Premier Asquith that there is no reason to believe the banks are unsafe. The government and financial institutions in Dublin are guarded by British troops, and machine guns have been mounted upon roofs of many buildings to sweep the streets.

A censored statement is published in the Daily News that the total of casualties "up to date" in the revolt was forty-two men killed and forty-six wounded. Lord Lansdowne said, in the house of lords, that the dead numbered nineteen and the wounded twenty-seven.

Some reports place the numbers of casualties during the fighting on Monday and Tuesday at 100 or more.

Lord Wimborne is making every effort to restore peace and he probably soon will have the help of Augustine Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland.

Many English newspapers, however, including even Liberal organs, are demanding the resignation of Mr. Birrell.

HAVE HOPE OF PEACE IN HARD COAL FIELD

Differences Referred Back to Sub-Committee.

New York, April 28.—It was announced at the conference of the joint committee of anthracite coal operators and miners that their differences had been referred back to sub-committees and that there was every prospect that they would be settled before he miners' tri-district convention of May 2, in Pottsville.

Thirty representatives of the United Mine Workers of America and an equal number of mine operators met in joint conference committee to consider the demands of the miners for an eight-hour day, a twenty per cent increase in wages and recognition of the union.

Sub-committees of the joint conference committee discussed the miners' demands for several weeks, were ready to report to the full membership that they had failed to agree.

The 24,000 bituminous coal miners on strike in District No. 5 in Pennsylvania, will go back to work under an agreement reached between John P. White for the coal miners and W. K. Fields for the Pittsburgh Coal company and other operators.

The miners have been on strike for a five per cent increase in wages which was agreed upon between the bituminous operators and the miners some time ago, but which the miners in District No. 5 say the Pittsburgh Coal company has refused to grant.

TO APPEASE JAPAN

Senate Committee Agrees to Modify Immigration Act.

Washington, April 28.—The senate immigration committee agreed to modify the Asiatic exclusion section of the pending immigration bill to eliminate reference to the Root-Takahira agreement restricting immigration of Japanese laborers.

The conference was attended by Senator Stone, chairman of the foreign relations committee.

The Japanese government resents the proposal to enact the agreement into law and also objects to a provision which by inference would class Japanese with excluded Hindus. A tentative draft of an amendment was considered and probably will be submitted to the state department for conference with the Japanese ambassador.

SCIENCE—INDUSTRY.

Radium Never Seen in Nature.

Radium is a metal and is described as having a white metallic luster. It has been isolated only once or twice, and few people have seen it. Radium is ordinarily obtained from its ores in the form of hydrous sulphate, chloride or bromide, and it is in the form of these salts that it is usually sold and used. These are all white or nearly white substances, whose appearance is no more remarkable than common salt or baking powder. Radium is found in nature in such exceedingly small quantities that it is never visible even when the material is examined with a microscope. Ordinarily radium ore carries only a small fraction of a grain per ton of material, and radium will never be found in large quantity, because it is formed by the decay of uranium, a process which is wonder fully slow, and radium itself decays and changes to other elements so rapidly that it is impossible for it to accumulate naturally in visible masses.—United States Geological Survey.

Uses of Chromium.

Chromium is a metal which when alloyed with steel gives it to hardness and toughness that make it useful in the manufacture of automobile wheels, armor plate, armor piercing projectiles, the shoes and dies of stamp mills, and tires for rolls used in crushing ores, steel and in other steels to which it is desired to give hardness and toughness. The huge orders placed in this country for war materials have not only resulted in a great demand for chromium steels to be used directly for purposes of war, but have led to the increased manufacture of special steels for cutting shells, rifle barrels and other instruments of war and are reflected in increased metal mining and greater consequent use of chromium steels for crushing machinery.—United States Geological Survey.

Lubrication of Bearings.

Lubrication of bearings, which are ordinarily inaccessible, may be accomplished by application of the principle that liquids tend to seek their own level, says Popular Mechanics.

The illustration shows a shaft bearing housed in a cast iron frame into which an oil can, no matter how long the spout, cannot reach. A hole was drilled in the bottom of the bearing and one of the same size was drilled in the frame. A tube was fitted into the openings and the other end of it cut off slightly above the level of the oil in the bearing. This level must be determined in order that a proper quantity of oil may be supplied. By filling the outer portion of the tube to the top the oil will find its level at the desired point, lubricating the bearing.

Light Portable Telephone.

A portable telephone made of aluminum and weighing two and one-half pounds; the invention of a forest officer, will be part of the regular equipment of patrolmen on the national forest the coming field season. This instrument is regarded as a great improvement over the set formerly used, which weighed ten pounds. It is said that a field man equipped with this telephone, a few yards of light emergency wire and a short piece of heavy wire to make the ground connection can cut in anywhere along the more than 20,000 miles of forest service telephone lines and get in touch with the headquarters of a supervisor or district ranger.

Tempering Lawn Mower Knives.

To harden the plates or knives of lawn mowers when they are made somewhat similar to a skate blade—that is, with a layer of iron between two layers of steel—get them to a blood red heat, grip them in the center with a pair of close tongs and plunge them in the water edgewise, moving them about until cold, but taking care to move them so that they go through the water edgewise. In this case the layer of iron helps to keep the blade to its original shape. When of different manufacture from the above they must be clamped between two pieces of iron and then treated as in the former case.—Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

About Piston Rings.

Broken piston rings will make them selves known by decreased compression and by an excessive amount of oil in the combustion chamber and on the spark plugs.

(Medical Advertising) YOUTH IN OLD AGE

How to Live to be One Hundred Years Old.

With proper attention to diet, prevention of colds, exercise, plenty of sleep, proper care of the skin and the use of a strengthening tonic like Vinol, years may be added to one's life.

A Civil War Veteran, Mr. W. H. Bowers, of Steubenville, Ohio, says: "I am 77 years of age. I suffered from general weakness, nervous breakdown and dizziness. An old doctor recommended Vinol. It built me up so that I was able to go to work as strong and well as ever."

The reason Vinol is so beneficial to old people is because it contains the very elements needed to replace declining strength with renewed vigor, viz.—the medicinal elements of fresh cod livers, without oil, peptonate of iron, beef peptonate and a mild tonic wine.

If Vinol fails to build up the feeble weakened system of old people, we will return the amount of money paid for it. C. Wm. Beales, Prop. of The People's Drug Store.

Tomorrow.

Do not let the shadow of tomorrow's disagreeable duty fall over the brightness that belongs to today. Do not double the shadow by forecast, and especially do not throw it over others. Leave the hour in the day where it belongs.

Make Stability the Aim.

"In summer or winter," said the proud advertisement of an old steamboat line, "in summer and winter, in storm and calm, the Commonwealth and the Plymouth Rock invariably make the passage;" and this should be the truth about you and me.—Prof. Le Baron Russell Briggs.

What Has Become of Them?

Someone asks what has become of the people who could formerly be entertained for hours by asking and answering conundrums. Well, they are too aged to go out much now and their children find eating Welsh rabbits less fatiguing to their overstrained intellects.—Jonesville (Wis.) Gazette.

"St. Dennis."

Among the ignorances of paragraphers is the use of "St. Dennis," whether as the name of a sensational dancer or otherwise. St. Dennis, with one "n," is a very creditable French member in the Roman hierarchy; the Irish Dennis, with two "n's," is a corruption of the name.—Springfield Republican.

"Twain Ever This."

He was a pious person, who longed to see his name enrolled among celebrities upon the scroll of fame. Now his name is in every mouth, but it seems a cruel joke; a clear bears his cognomen—and his name goes up in smoke.

Neglect of children's colds often lays the foundation of serious lung trouble. On the other hand, it is harmful to continually dose delicate little stomachs with internal medicines or to keep the children always indoors.

Relief from rheumatism and sciatica can be obtained by drinking lemonade and avoiding alcoholic drinks.

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Josephine Summers was as a girl from ten to sixteen years an incorrigible tomboy. Everybody called her Joe, and everybody admitted that she was well named, for she might be considered either a boy or a girl. Her most intimate friends were boys, and they always spoke of her as "one of us."

When Joe was fifteen a change came over her—that is, she was passing from childhood to womanhood. This transition was in her case peculiar. A girl of fifteen knows that she can't do those things she did when a child. For instance, she can't climb trees with the same freedom; she can't ride on horse back straddle with apparel fitted for the purpose; there is not the same freedom in her friendships with boys.

Joe had not quite let go all these juvenile ways, and yet she was reaching for young ladyhood. One thing she had not yet grasped, and that was a proper appreciation of being made love to by a young man. Boys had never thought of making love to her. A boy would no more have made love to her than to another boy. For a boy to make love to her would have sounded ridiculous, and, ten to one, she would have laughed at him.

The first time that anything serious in the way of a love matter occurred to Joe Summers was when she was fifteen and a half years old. Two boys, Bob Atherton and Johnnie Myers, laid longing eyes upon her. Neither of them made any mention of the fact to her. If one walked home with her from school the other kept out of the way. If one engaged her for a game of tennis the other amused himself in some other way. Joe did not see the rivalry, but the boys were conscious of it, and there was not a day that one did not try to get ahead of the other.

Of course this constant effort was bound in the end to make trouble between the two boys. Every time one saw the other enjoying Joe's society to the exclusion of the other the green monster flapped his wings. An explosion is sure to come in such cases, and this one was no exception.

All three of the parties to this triangular love affair—though the girl had no sentimental part in it at all—were in the same class in the Ellingham high school. When a certain baseball game was played between the Ellingham and the Waterford high schools Bob Atherton saw on the grand stand Joe Summers sitting with a vacant place beside her. He joined her and asked if he might occupy it. She gave him permission, saying that she expected another boy to sit with her, but there was room for him on the other side.

Now, the other boy was Johnnie Myers. Before he reached the stand the place on the other side of Joe was occupied, and he saw Bob in his place. He didn't approach the two and make a scene, but there was consternation within him. He did not even claim his right to sit by Joe. He went off to another part of the field, nursing his wrath not against Joe, who was to be blamed if any one was, but against Bob.

When the game was finished and the multitude left the athletic grounds Johnnie saw his rival walking with Joe toward her home. His own route lay in this direction. Indeed, he lived not far from her, and she could look from her window into his back yard. When Bob left her Johnnie joined him and accused him of intentionally occupying his place at the baseball game. Bob was innocent of the charge, but certain words used by Johnnie riled him.

Joe had laid aside her belongings and was sitting by her window when she saw Bob climb the fence in the rear of Johnnie's home and approach Johnnie with apparent hostile intent. The next thing she saw was a battle.

It did not take Joe long to discern the cause of this encounter. Realizing that she had not properly protected the boy she had promised to sit beside at the game, it was plain to her that this disgraceful fight between her two friends was her own fault. Running downstairs and out through a back door, she vaulted all fences that separated her from the combatants, finally alighting in the yard where they were fighting. But so engaged were they with each other that they did not see her.

What predominated in Joe's mind was this: Through her neglect these two boys had been brought to punch each other. She was angry with them, but still more angry with them for making her fault more glaring. The fact of their rivalry for her did not enter her head. Indeed, she did not know that there was a rivalry.

It happened that the gardener had been using a hose to water some plants and had left it on the ground. Joe seized it, and the first intimation of her presence to the competitors for her favor was a stream of water poured over them. For a few moments, not discerning the cause of the interruption, they continued to maul each other. Then both turned and, seeing the object of their devotion directing the stream, they ceased to fight and stood apart, whereupon Joe dropped the hose and stood looking at them angrily. She was trying to find words to express what was within her, but failing, she jumped the fence and ran away.

That was the end of the rivalry for Joe Summers' favor on the part of these two boys, for she turned the cold shoulder on both of them.

NO ADJOURNMENT
UNTIL LATE FALL*Congress Will Be in Session
When Conventions Are Held.*WILSON CAN CALL A HALT.

If Administration's Measures Are Not Passed the Lawmakers Must Spend Hot Months in Washington, but if President Sends Out the Word the Session Can Come to an End.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, April 28.—[Special.]—It is curious to hear men talk about completing the business of this session before the national conventions. If there is one thing more certain than any other it is that congress will not only extend beyond the conventions, but that two months after the conventions adjourn congress will still be pounding away at some of the bills that the administration desires passed.

Of course we are taking into consideration the fact that a lot of this legislation is really going to be enacted before the president will consent to an adjournment. If the president wanted to close up in a hurry and he should simply pass the word along for congress to pass the appropriation bills and quit, in that case the end might be brought about rather quickly, as both houses would speed up and rush through bills which are now taking a great deal of time.

The First Line of Defense.

If the navy is in reality the first line of defense—and everybody agrees that it is—then it is more than likely that the naval bill will take more time than the army bill. There is going to be a hard fight over the bill, because the real friends of preparedness are going to try to make the measure carry out the preparedness idea in a much more satisfactory manner than the army bill can possibly do. No matter what the house does in the matter of ships, the senate is likely to increase the number, and the naval program will excite a much more bitter and acrimonious debate than did the army bill.

If the army bill had been confined alone to the army and did not provide as well for the volunteers and the militia it would not have had such an easy passage through the congress.

Tariff Bobs Up.

Congress tried hard to keep the tariff out of the discussion of the agricultural appropriation bill, but without avail. During the talk upon the tariff Representative Ewing, child of senative Ewing for going back to the silver demonization of 1873 and for quoting something that Colonel Ingersoll had said a few years later.

"Colonel Ingersoll was supposed to be a sort of preacher," said Mr. Fordney, which was an entirely new view of the celebrated agnostic. Fordney did not take much stock in Ingersoll's judgment on religious matters. "I would like to believe there is no hell, but I cannot believe it," said the Michigan standpatter. But Fordney himself went back quite a ways, because before he got through he said, "Your president, a Democratic president, Grover Cleveland, a brave man, a grand man and much more appreciated after having been president than he was before or during his term of office, declined to sign a Democratic tariff bill, and it became a law without his signature."

John Dwight, Back Number.

John Dwight says that last winter when the Republican state committee of New York met the member from his county furnished him a proxy, and he attended the meeting. "When I arrived there and looked over the crowd," said Dwight, "I found that besides myself and one or two old timers that used to run things, an entirely new set of fellows had come in. I told George Aldridge that we were back numbers and we had better let the boys run things hereafter. I am out of politics, but I am an interested onlooker."

Clark on Forests.

During the discussion of the forest reserves in the house Speaker Clark took up the subject for a short time. "When this war ends, if it ever ends," said Clark, "I shall be in favor of sending a commission to Germany to study their forestry system and see if we cannot secure information which will enable us to administer our forest reserves so as to make something out of them instead of paying out twice as much as we receive for taking care of them." In as gentle manner as could be done various members informed the speaker that our forestry system had been taken from the German system, but that it was unsuccessful because conditions were not the same. It would take too long to explain why it is that our system is not on a paying basis, but it will be many years before it can be so considered.

Under No Restraint.

While the senate was operating under certain restrictions as to debate Senator Hardwick wanted to know if he could speak on the main proposition rather than on the amendment then pending, to which Vice President Marshall responded, "The senator from Georgia knows that he must speak to the question, but he can speak in any thing, in heaven above or on the earth beneath."

"I will try to restrain my argument," remarked Hardwick.

His Helping Hand.

The Magistrate—So you admit making these counterfeits? The Prisoner—Well, your honor, it struck me that there was a shortage of the genuine article.
